

Nick Hutchinson Lecturer, Macquarie University

Nick Hutchinson started teaching geography in Australia in 1971 and now has a part-time position at Macquarie University teaching 'Geography in the Secondary School' to prospective school teachers, and, 'Beyond Borders: the rights and responsibilities of global citizenship' under the Macquarie International Program.

Nick has been the recipient of several awards: in 2009, the Professional Teachers' Council NSW Outstanding Professional Service Award; in 2003, the Macdonald Holmes Medal for distinguished contribution to the field of geographical education in Australia; and, in 1991 a Fellowship of the Geography Teachers Association, NSW for distinguished service to the Association and to Geographical Education in Australia. He has recently served as Higher School Certificate Chief Examiner, Geography and is a co-author of 'Towards a National Geography Curriculum for Australia.'